1886.
The present Catalogue has been compiled by Mr. J. F. Blashardt, formerly of the Bengal Civil Service, who has for several years been employed in cataloguing the works in the North Indian Vernaculars in the Museum Library. It is, perhaps, the first attempt that has been made to arrange Bengali writings under authors' names; and the principles on which this has been done are fully stated in the Preface.

GEO. BULLEN,
Keeper of the Department of Printed Books.
PREFACE.

In submitting to the public the present Catalogue of Bengali books contained in the Library of the British Museum the compiler finds it necessary to explain the general principles of cataloguing adopted by him, and the special rules laid down for the treatment of Oriental names of authors and books. He has tried to observe throughout one consistent plan of transliteration, based on intelligible principles of etymology, yet rejecting alike the popular mode of writing names according to their modern pronunciation, and the pedantic system of referring everything back to its original Sanskrit form; thereby making unnecessary deviations from proper Bengali idiom. The Catalogue is drawn up on a definite system, which it is hoped will be found both simple and practical.

The Catalogue comprises: (1) all purely Bengali works; (2) translations of such works into English or other languages; and (3) polyglott works, of which one language is Bengali, whether as translation, paraphrase, or commentary on Sanskrit or other originals. Dictionaries and grammars written in English for English readers have been excluded.

As regards the general scheme under which this Catalogue has been prepared, it will only be necessary to observe that the cataloguing rules in force for the General Library have been adhered to as closely as possible, subject to certain modifications, rendered necessary under the peculiar conditions of Oriental usage. As a general rule, all works are primarily catalogued under the names of their authors, whether such names appear in the work, or (if no name is to be found), wherever the authorship is an undisputed fact, or has been ascertained by the cataloguer from bibliographies, reports, catalogues or other sources. Anonymous works, of unascertained or doubtful authorship, if provided with an English title-page, are catalogued under the same rules as are observed in the General Library, and, if possessing Bengali title-pages only, are, if possible, placed under the name of the work or otherwise under some heading which appears natural and consistent with general principles.

To facilitate the finding of any book, whether anonymous or otherwise, by a reader who may be unacquainted with the author's name, or the cataloguing rules, an Index has been appended to the work, containing both the genuine Oriental titles of all the books in this catalogue (whore such exist), and those containing English words introduced as an essential part of the title, with a reference to the particular form of author's name, or other heading, under which each work may be found. All purely English, or Bengali forms of English titles, such as Lord Kenijn (i.e. Lord Canning), are excluded. This Index is in Roman characters, and has been prepared with strict reference to the rules adopted for transliteration, shortly to be explained, and not necessarily in the mode of spelling found on the title-page. In cases where there exists a considerable variation of spelling between the correct form, and that adopted by the author, both forms are entered in the Index, so as to ensure every possible facility to the reader in the identification of the book. The following are examples of such fanciful incorrect forms of spelling, viz. Subboosovokarkee Potrcia, Annud Nuhoorrry, Ovignam Sakuntollah, Bigyama Schalghi, Gonigtmankuro, Shabetree-Shuttoban-Gectabhecomoy, and others. The same remarks apply also to the titles of books in the Muhammadan Bengali dialect (to be noticed later on), and to titles containing pure Hindustani, Persian or Arabic words, with this exception that, whereas no such titles are to be found in English characters in the books themselves, it has been necessary to give only the correct forms, without noticing the uncounted forms which they would assume if transliterated strictly from their Bengali modes of spelling. For example, এছরারেল ঠাবননা by Muliammad Khagit, is shown under its correct form of “Asrar al-khwabnmaah” only. It would have been absurd, and perhaps unintelligible, to put it under its possible transliterated form as “Echhrarol khabnamah.” So also অহাজাঁমেষ্ঠারাত by Muliammad Fazl Al-Din is entered as “Ahhawm i salat,” instead of “Ahhawmocchhahlat.”

The titles in the catalogue itself reproduce the spelling of the works themselves, and thus retain any errors, orthographical, grammatical, or typographical that they may contain. In cases where it has been necessary to add somewhat to the titles, to render them more complete, or intelligible, as also in the descriptions of the works, more especially in the case of Bengali books without English title-pages, the matter supplied is shown within square brackets, thus [ ], and wherever quotations have been made from any part of books, other than the title-pages, they appear in parentheses.

The plan of treating as identical the letters “i” and “j,” and “u” and “v” in the alphabetical arrangement of words adopted in the General Catalogue, has been discarded here as in the Sanskrit Catalogue.

We come now to the consideration of the system which has been adopted, both as regards transliteration generally,¹ and also as to the treatment of names of Oriental authors. The latter question depends necessarily very much on the former. It is obvious that an essential point, in dealing with the question of transcription, is the adoption of a uniform method, for a want of consistency would result in confusion, and considerable perplexity to any one desirous of consulting the catalogue. Any attempt at transliteration on the basis of local pronunciation would be highly unsatisfactory, being arbitrary in its character, and depending solely on the provincial usage adopted by the cataloguer, which may be more or less faulty or incorrect. So also it would be simply impossible to adopt the modes of spelling made use of by native authors themselves, in the case of books containing English title-pages, for not only have different methods been followed during different periods in the history of Bengali literature, but each individual author has adopted a system of his own, often very incorrect. Moreover, it frequently happens that the same author spells his own name in totally different ways, not only in different works, but even in different editions of the same work. Thus the eminent Sanskrit scholar 1-varachandra Vidyasagara has spelt his name in no less than four different ways. So also we find the conflicting forms Jodu Nath Mookherjee, Jodu Nath Mukherjee, and Jadunatha Mukherji. Then again we meet with palpably incorrect and fanciful forms, which do not appear to be based on any fixed principles of transliteration, such as Kannya Loll Doy, Nobin Krisiona Banerjee, Tin Curry Ghosal, and others. Similar cases of clearly incorrect modes of spelling have already been given with reference to the titles of books. Many other such instances might be adduced, but these will suffice to show that a system of transliteration on purely phonetic bases is impracticable, as well as irrational and unscholarly. The retention of forms such as Banerjea, Mukerjea, Chatterjea, and the like, is open to the same objection, for not only do we find the word Banerja, for instance, spelt in various ways, such as Bonnerjee, Bonarjee, Banerjea, and so on, but many authors, especially those unacquainted with English, adopt the correct Sanskrit forms of Vandyopādiḥyāna, Mukhopādiḥyāna, and Chattrapādiḥyāna. In fact these are the forms in which Bengalis invariably write their names, though in ordinary conversation they make use of the abbreviated Bengali forms of Banerjea, etc.

It is clear from these considerations that the adoption of a systematic and uniform mode of transliteration is indispensable. The system adopted by the late Dr. E. Haas in the preparation of the “Catalogue of Sanskrit and Pali Books in the Library of the British Museum,” based on the system of Max Muller, Muir and Aufrecht, is the one that has been followed in this Catalogue, with a few exceptions, which may be seen on referring to the tables appended to this preface. All pure Sanskrit words of every description, whether in their original forms, or with Bengali inflectional terminations, have therefore been treated strictly in accordance with that system of transliteration, and without any regard to the Bengali mode of pronunciation of any particular letter. So also the short vowel “a” when inherent but unexpressed in the Bengali pronunciation of Sanskrit words, which Dr. Haas indicated by the somewhat cumbersome expedient of parentheses, has necessarily been used when transliterating such words; but in words other than Sanskrit, and in Bengali inflectional terminations, this unexpressed “a” has been omitted. Thus we have the form “vanavāsa” for the Bengali “banabōṣ,” and its genitive “vanavāsier,” “yātrā” for “jātṛā,” “jāhāna” for “gyān,” and so on.

All purely Bengali, or “desi” words, as well as Bengali modifications of Sanskrit words, such as the adjective “Bāṅgalī” from “Vāṅga,” “hāt” from “hasta,” and such like, have been treated, as far as possible, on the same general method of transliteration. But here the characteristic modes of Bengali pronunciation (as in the word “Bāṅgalī,”) have been retained, omitting the inherent unsounded “a.” To treat such words on the same principles as are applied to pure Sanskrit words would be illogical and pedantic. It is gratifying to observe that this system of transliteration of Sanskrit words and names is being very largely appreciated, and generally adopted by the natives themselves, the old-fashioned forms of spelling according to the pronunciation being almost universally discarded.

Following this general principle, all pure Persian, Arabic, or Hindustani words have been, as far as possible, spelt in their correct forms, and not Bengaleized, so to say. This rule applies particularly to the class of Bengali literature already referred to as current amongst Muhammadan readers, which of late years has been very largely developed, and which forms a distinct element in it. It consists mainly of metrical versions of romances, and of works on Muhammadan ritual, religious observances and tradition, based on Persian, Arabic, or Hindustani sources. Such works abound in Persian or Arabic words, or their Hindustani modifications, not translated into equivalent Bengali expressions, but retained in Bengali modes of spelling, which, to the unpractised reader, are not only extremely barbarous in form, but at times hardly recognizable. This species of literature is generally known by the name of Muhammadan Bengali, and in transcribing such words it has been found quite impossible and confusing to adopt any but the orthography of the original language. One or two specimen of this kind of Bengali have already been given when dealing with the subject of Index titles. Of names derived from Persian and other sources we have Hīlādīr, Majumādīr, Sankīr, Fakirhūnd, and the like. In the case of place-names, when supplied by the cataloguer, it has been thought best to adopt the compromise between scientific and popular usage fixed by Dr. Hunter’s Gazetteer.

1 In the “Journal of the National Indian Association,” No. 169, for January, 1885, which gives a list of Indian students in England, we find, side by side, conflicting forms, such as Chakravarti and Chuckerbuddy, Datta and Dutt, De and Day, Mitra and Mitter, Sinha and Singh.
Lastly, we come to the consideration of the forms under which names of Bengali authors should be catalogued. There is a tendency amongst English-speaking Bengalis to attempt to assimilate their names to the English system of Christian and surname, as for example, P. C. Sircar (Peary Churn Sircar), S. C. Bose (Shib Chunder Bose), K. M. Banerjea. In these cases it will be seen that there is no real analogy between the structure of Bengali and English names. In the last-mentioned name, for instance, the word Banerjea, or its correct Sanskrit form Vandyopādhyāya, is no surname at all, but a caste-title for one of the four classes of Rājñi Kulīn Brahmans, and as such is common to every member of that class, totally independent of any actual kinship. Whether it may be convenient or not for English-speaking Bengalis to adopt such caste-titles as surnames, is a question quite distinct from the expediencies of cataloguing. It is impossible to make use of them as surnames, for the natives themselves do not regard them in such a light, as is abundantly clear from the fact that they frequently drop the caste-title altogether, and substitute either the word “Sarmā” if a Brahman, “Varmā” if a Kshatriya, or one or more degree-titles, such as Vidyāśīgara, Nyāyānākāra, Kaviratna, Bhattāchārya, and the like, or occasionally add them to the caste-titles. Thus we find a grammar written by “Prasannachandra Chakrabarti,” who in a later edition appears as “Prasannachandra Vidyāratna.” If in the first instance he were to be catalogued as P. C. Chakrabarti, or Chuckerbutty, he should in the later edition be called P. C. Vidyāratna. Similarly we have another author under the different forms of Chandrakumāra Sarmā, Chandrakumāra Bhattāchārya, and Chandrakumāra Kaviratna. In the case of some authors, as Laksmanānana Nyāyānākāra, the translator of the Hitopadeśa, and the well-known Sanskrit scholar and author Īśvarachandra Vidyāśīgara, the caste-title has entirely disappeared, and this appears to be the rule generally when a degree-title is obtained. A Bengali’s real name, his nomen proprium, is that which comes first, and stands before the caste or degree-titles, and in most cases does not consist of two distinct names, as in the case of English Christian names, but of one compound name, generally denoting an epithet or attribute of one or other of the Hindu deities, and formed by the rules of Sanskrit sāmA. In the illustration noticed above the initial letters K. M. stand for the ‘la-purashka’ compound Kṛishnā-mohana, i.e. Kṛishṇa-pleasing, though in all parts of India the consciousness of this grammatical fact seems to be generally lost. It follows then, that for cataloguing purposes, where a definite system is indispensable, the imitation of a Christian and surname, though it might, on grounds of expediency alone, be attempted in the case of some English-speaking authors, would be found quite impracticable when applied to native authors generally; and as in point of fact in these cases Christian names do not exist, the only clear mode of cataloguing is to take their names just as they occur, and to transcribe them according to the system of transliteration fixed upon. It is interesting to notice that Bengalis themselves recognize the propriety of this system, and are generally adopting it in their title-pages.

1. Syāmānanda Sarkār in his “Introduction to the Bengalee language,” p. 357, of the Calcutta edition of 1850, in his remarks on castes and titles, says, “If a person’s name be Ishwarachandra, his hereditary title Vandyopādhyāya, and if he has received the title of Bāryāsāgar, then he is addressed Bāryāsāgar Mahāshay, and occasionally Ishwarachandra Bāryāsāgara Bhattāchārya Mahāshay.” This bears out the argument that amongst the natives themselves the caste-title Vandyopādhyāya, or Banerjea, is not regarded as part of the nomen proprium. Nilamāna Mākhopādhyāya Nyāyānākāra is an instance of the retention of both caste and degree-titles.

2. It is curious to observe how some modern Bengali authors, whilst ready to adopt this system of transliteration, utterly refuse to do so in the case of their own names. Thus we have the “Ayuṣyadā vijñāna” by Irond Lal Sen. So also the author of the English novel entitled “Govinda Sāmanta” use this system, with slight modifications, in spelling the names of his characters, as Keșa (not ‘Keshab’), of common objects, as tikshudai, suni, gūdai, and even well-known towns, e.g., Burdwan and Cuttack, scarcely recognizable to some readers as “Taslimānā” and “Kacada,” and yet retain the spelling of his own name in the merely conventional form “Irodh Bilader Day.” This example, amongst several that could be noticed, proves the fact that a rational system of spelling is being generally adopted, and it is only reasonable that it should be extended also to the spelling of the names of Bengali authors.
One or two exceptional cases must be noticed. One is that of Michael Madhusūdana Datta, where the English name, being a genuine Christian name, has been treated accordingly, i.e. appearing in a parenthesis after his real name. Another is the case of an author signing himself ग च भमक. As it does not appear what the initials stand for, whether Govindachandra, Gopālachandra, or other such compound, there was no alternative but to leave it an open question, and the only practical method that suggested itself in cataloguing this unknown name was that of placing it thus, Vasāk, Gā... Cha... In another instance the author has omitted his real name entirely, and has given us only his caste name "Bose."

All titles of rank, such as Rājā, Rāi Bahādur, Munshi, Pundit, and the like, have been generally discarded, except when it has been necessary to insert them, by way of distinguishing between authors of the same name, in which cases they invariably follow the names in italics.

In conclusion the compiler begs to acknowledge his indebtedness to Professor Cecil Bendall, of the British Museum, not only for his very thorough and careful revision of the whole work as it issued from the press, whereby several errors, typographical, discritical, and otherwise, which had escaped notice in the correction of the proofs, were detected and rectified, but also for the many valuable suggestions and corrections received from him during the preparation of the work, in the adoption of the scheme generally, and in the application of technical cataloguing rules, so as to ensure, as far as possible, a strict uniformity with existing Catalogues of the British Museum.
